A VERY RARE opportunity to own an AUTHENTIC piece of DOCTOR WHO history: a HAEMOVORE HAND as used in the classic

1989 story, THE CURSE OF FENRIC.

This is a painted and textured latex glove with resin talons.

PLEASE NOTE: This is NOT a reproduction, but a genuine item which, given its age (17 years!), has survived in a pretty good if delicate state. All five talons are intact and in perfect condition, although the latex has dried out and cracked in places, especially the lower finger joints (see pics), and regrettably the thumb has now become separated, though it is still included, and may be repairable. Some years ago, the glove was packed out with blue cellophane to help retain its shape (visible in the pics).

The glove measures 44cm in length.

A fantastic looking item, and a great addition to any collection or display. I'm not aware that any similar items have been auctioned in the past, so DON'T MISS OUT on this chance to own a memento of classic DOCTOR WHO!

Please email with any other queries.

I will of course package the hand sensitively to the winner.
